If you can embrace uncertainty, you will be more successful. That's true whether you're arguing a court case, negotiating with a client or boss, or dealing with personal relationships.

Learn to let go, increase your confidence, project a stronger image, and feel comfortable in those circumstances in which you don't have all the answers (your secret is safe with us).

Instructor Jason P. Lorber guides you through an energizing, hilarious, and powerful three-hour improvisational workshop for lawyers. You'll sharpen your ability to respond to the unexpected by taking part in thought-provoking, fun, and instructive games and exercises in a structured, safe, and supportive setting.

- Get an edge in the courtroom
- Project more confidence in negotiations
- Tap into your (stifled?) creativity
- Battle burnout & reduce stress
- Nail your opening and closing statements

Jason P. Lorber is an accomplished TV, stage, & film actor; standup comedian; and improvisational performer. He teaches improvisational workshops to actors, attorneys, politicians, and business executives. With an MBA from Stanford, Lorber excels at transferring the benefits of improvisation, even to skeptical and argumentative lawyers.
