

Kate Lamson has spent nearly fourteen years with the Bennington Public Defender's Office, where she represents some of Vermont's most vulnerable individuals in criminal court and, for the past two years, has served as a co-supervisor of the office. She began her Vermont legal career as a law clerk and prosecutor in the Bennington County State's Attorney's Office, an experience that informs her approach to criminal practice and institutional decision-making. Her work includes extensive jury trial experience, and she regularly teaches continuing legal education programs for the Office of the Defender General, including having served as faculty for its Trial School.