Non-profit and tax exempt organizations of every size are complex organizations. Boards of directors need to recruit and retain talented management, supervise the investment of endowments in often volatile markets, engage profit-making corporations in joint ventures, and ensure the integrity of systems and policies in environment of increased governmental and public scrutiny. Effective governance of these organizations is essential to advancing the non-profit's mission. When governance fails, the organization itself and its directors are exposed to potential liability. This program will provide you with a real-world guide to major governance issues for non-profits, including fiduciary duties of directors and officers, managing endowments, executive compensation issues, compliance and conflicts of interest.

- Governance issues for nonprofit organizations
- Current IRS and attorneys general investigation and enforcement priorities
- Essential provisions of non-profit management agreements
- Best practices for determining executive compensation
- Fiduciary duties, potential liability, and indemnification of nonprofit directors and officers
- Compliance issues, including Form 990
